Many Distinguished Folk Still in Town

By MILDRED MARSHALL KOONCE.

MIDSUMMER quiet prevails at the Capital where deserted thoroughfares and shuttered houses in the residential sections are the order of the season. The fashionable folk who yet remain are indulging in the unwonted luxury of a real rest. Gardens, crisply green and fresh, and deep verandas sheltered with vines and flowering plants, seem to be the favorite morning and afternoon rendezvous of the feminine half of society, but in the early evening, at that lovely hour between sunset and dusk, smart electric and big touring cars make their appearance on Potomac Drive and the city wakes once more to a semblance of its winter gayety.

Perhaps the most distinguished of the motorists are the Secretary of State and Mrs. Lansing, who drive for an hour or more each evening, with Mrs. Lansing's fluffy Pomeranian on the seat beside them. The little informal entertaining in honor of the Secretary and his charming wife, who really contemplate remaining in town throughout the summer, has gone far toward relieving the monotony of the social quiet. Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hertle, and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Crozier have been among their hosts in the last few weeks. Mr. and Mrs. William Walker Smith gave a dinner for them Monday evening when the other guests were Sir Richard and Lady Crawford, of London; Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips and Miss Lacey.

Mrs. Eberle, wife of Capt. Eberle, commandant of the Navy Yard, gave a charming party for Mrs. Lansing last Tuesday, when she took a few guests for an afternoon's cruise up the Potomac on the commandant's barge. There have been several similarly delightful occasions when Mrs. Eberle has entertained in this manner. Her invitations are generally extended quite informally by telephone and the arrangements sufficiently impromptu to be wholly interesting, while bridge and tea, so acceptable always, become a positive delight on the cool, shaded deck of the barge.

Mrs. Eberle is among the many army and navy matrons who are lingering late in town this season, their summer plans depending mainly upon their husbands' duties. Capt. and Mrs. S. J. Bayard Schindler are still here and expect to remain until the autumn, when they probably will take a brief jaunt to some interesting resort. Col. and Mrs. Richmond P. Davis are having charming outings in their new car, and have delayed their departure until some time in August, when they will motor to Long Island for a series of visits. Mrs. Gill, wife of Capt. W. A. Gill, U. S. N., has just gone, as have Mrs. Philip Sheridan and several of the ladies of Fort Myer. Mrs. Wooten, wife of Col. Wooten, commandant at the Washington Barracks, will leave some time this week and will go to Canada for the remainder of the summer.

Quite a number of the official folk as well as the residential contingent are staying on in town from choice. Some frankly declare that there is small incentive to leave the city, since they can find such pleasure at home. The wife of a prominent official of the State Department remarked the other day that she was too comfortable to leave town. With her garden, which has just reached a fascinating stage of growth, her two verandas, including a sleeping porch, and the opportunity to spend afternoons en negligé, there is small necessity for seeking a summer resort.

Miss Elizabeth Harding, daughter of Mr. W. P. C. Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, is one of the younger folk who lingers in town. Miss Harding has had great fun with her new car and seems not to mind the atmosphere of desolation which is slowly prevailing in social circles. She will join the ranks of the departing next week, however, when she will leave for a series of visits which will include White Sulphur Springs, Gloucester, Mass., and Long Island. Miss Harding will be one of next season's debutantes, by the way, and judging from her instant popularity in the Capital, where she came a comparative stranger, she will be a favorite among the buds of next winter.

In Official Circles

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Lansing are spending the week-end at Manchester, Mass., where they are the guests of Col. and Mrs. E. M. House.

The Secretary of the Treasury, who has been the guest of the President at the White House, where he came last Tuesday to attend the Cabinet meeting, has returned to his summer home at North Haven, Me. Mrs. McAdoo and the younger children have been there for several weeks.

The Secretary of War has gone to Seabright, N. J., to spend the week-end with Mrs. Garrison.

The Secretary of the Navy left Washington Friday evening for North Carolina, where he will join Mrs. Daniels and their sons, who are spending a few weeks at Moorehead City. The Secretary is expected to return on Tuesday, but Mrs. Daniels will remain at the seaside resort for some time longer.

The Attorney General has gone to Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., where Mrs. Gregory and the young people of the family are spending the summer.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Burleson will have as their guests this week

SENORITA DE PENA, who is spending her summer with her parents, the Minister of Uruguay and Mme. de Pena, at Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.

Vacation Books

109 Titles 50c Cloth Bound

Don't forget that such books cost $1.00 and more on the trains and at seashore and mountain resorts. And don't forget the choice of titles here includes all the best, the following being very highly recommended.

The Inside of the Cup

By WINSTON CHURCHILL. Illustrated by Howard Giles.

The Reverend John Hodder is called to a fashionable church in a Middle Western city. He knows singularly little of modern problems, and in his theology is as orthodox as the rich men who control his church could desire. The facts of modern life are thrust upon Hodder; an awakening follows, and a struggle, and in the end he works out a solution which brings with it a stronger renewal of faith.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY,

By George Barr McCutcheon. Illustrated by A. I. Keller. Jacket in color.

The hero of this story, a young and engaging American, is called a fool by his uncle because he has money and because he insists on writing books, buys a castle and then the story begins—and never leaves off for a single instant until it lands its reader, breathless and delighted at finish. The heroine, the secret chamber, the mysterious goings-on; the thousand and one adventures that are crowded into this engaging tale, make absorbing reading.

BETTY ZANE,

By Zane Grey. Illustrated, Jacket in full color.

This story tells of the bravery and the heroism of Betty, the beautiful young sister of old Col. Zane, one of the bravest pioneers. Life along the frontier, the attack by the Indians, Betty's heroic defense of the beleaguered garrison at Wheeling, the burning of the Fort, and Betty's final race for life, make up this never-to-be-forgotten story.

THE LITTLE NUGGET,

By F. G. Woodhouse. Frontispiece and Jacket in color.

An American millionaire and his wife have been divorced upon the ground of his infidelity. The millionaire has given the father custody of the child, for whom the mother cherishes a weak-minded idolatry. To steal the boy becomes the purpose of the mother's life and she employs persons to kidnap him. At the same time rival professional kidnappers try to gain possession of the boy, so as to hold him for a ransom.

PHOTOPLAY TITLES

UNDER THE CRESCENT,

By Nell Shipman. Photoplay Edition lavishly illustrated with scenes from the book. Jacket in color.
